

We Need You! Become “Past Protectors”!

5 workshops, 5 groups of young people, Scotland wide | Pilot, March- May 2019

WORKSHOP CONTENT

Personalised for your group:

- explore the heritage which is important to your group and learn more about these places, spaces and experiences
- explore any risks to these places and spaces, including crime and anti-social behaviour
- explore how these places and spaces can be protected and recorded and ways in which young people can be actively involved in this
- co-create and develop workshop ideas for other groups of young people based on what you discover

WORKSHOP METHODS

- using digital and creative tools to record and explore heritage sites
- interactive and personalised (can be mapped to Curriculum for Excellence experiences and outcomes if required)
- delivered by experienced heritage and placemaking education staff

BENEFITS FOR YOUR ORGANISATION

- take part in a national pilot project and influence the development of future Historic Environment Scotland project work
- all participants gain an Archaeology Scotland Heritage Hero Award and explore heritage related citizenship opportunities
- raise the profile of your organisation through featuring in case study and learning and teaching materials
- networking and peer-to-peer learning opportunities

Following the formation of the Scottish Heritage Crime Group, the project is designed to be a proactive way to promote awareness of heritage and heritage crime, and help young people have a say in heritage and crime issues affecting their community. Historic Environment Scotland has commissioned PAS to deliver this national heritage project, Past Protectors, with steering group members from organisations which include Police Scotland and Archaeology Scotland. We are now signing up participants and would like to offer you the chance to take part (workshops at your chosen venue, half to full day duration to suit you and your group)
